

Problem Statement

- Everyone struggles in some classes, but it is very difficult to find others who are also struggling to study with and learn from. There are no apps that connect students in the same university to study with and create study groups with each other.

What is the problem?

- The problem is that there is no easy way to meet people and form a study group with them.

Who is experiencing the problem?

- Anyone who is struggling in a class and cannot find anyone to study with is experiencing this problem.

Where is the problem taking place?

- This problem takes place mostly at college universities, but it can also take place in high school or community colleges.

Why does it matter?

- It matters because every student needs to pass their classes so they can move on with their lives. College students are the world's future engineers, teachers, doctors, etc., so they need to know what they are doing. A solution to the problem would enable this.
